3. Placing a stop-loss order will not necessarily always limit your losses. Extreme market conditions could make it impossible to execute such orders at the price you stipulated.

4. A spread or straddle position can be as risky as a simple long or short position and can potentially be more complex to gauge in terms of your overall risk..

5. Futures, options and contracts for difference, forward contracts and foreign exchange Markets can be highly volatile and investment in them carries a substantial risk of loss. The high degree of "gearing" or "leverage" which is often obtainable in trading these markets stems from the payment of what is a comparatively modest deposit or margin when compared to overall contract value. As a result, a relatively small market movement can result in substantial loss exceeding your original investment.

6. If you take (buy) an option, your risk in most cases will be less than trading in futures, spot or forward foreign exchange since you should not lose more than the premium you paid plus any transaction charges.

7. If you grant (sell) an option your risk of loss may be as great as your exposure in trading futures, spot or forward foreign exchange since you carry the risk of unlimited potential loss which, following a relatively small adverse market movement, can exceed the premium payment received by you for granting (selling) the option. Moreover, you may have no control over when you might be required to exercise the option. Only experienced traders with substantial capital should contemplate granting options.

8. There are many different types of options and you should discuss with your broker, your investment requirements and the risks involved in entering such contracts, before committing yourself.

This brief statement cannot disclose all risks of investments in options, futures, forward contracts, CFDs and foreign exchange markets. They are not suitable for many members of the public and you should carefully study such investments before you commit funds to them. They may also have tax consequences and on this you should consult your lawyer, accountant or other tax adviser.

I/we declare, bindingly and finally, that I/we are fully satisfied with:
the contract documents, its terms and conditions.

Best Execution Policy

General principle

Best Execution refers to our obligation as a firm to execute orders on behalf of customers to ensure that the prices those orders receive reflect the optimal mix of price improvement, speed and likelihood of execution. This policy describes Investors Europe Limited's (IEL's) approach to best execution and describes the main factors that IEL evaluates to determine the best way to execute an order on behalf of the client. It applies both to retail and professional clients as defined in IEL's general terms and conditions.

Best Execution In Practice

We will take all care to obtain the best possible result for our customer with reference to price, costs born by the customer, size, nature of the transactions, time of reception of order, speed and likelihood of execution and trading venue taking into account the state of the relevant market(s).

The relevant market(s) shall be deemed to be the market(s) offering the most favourable trading conditions also in terms of transparency, liquidity and clearing and settlement arrangements in connection with the envisaged transaction. If IEL executes in another trading venue, we will demonstrate that this has been done in accordance with the customer's best interest.

IEL will act with due skill, care and diligence and will pay due regard to its customer's interests – selecting the most opportune time to execute the customer order. We will endeavour to take reasonable care to ascertain the price which is the best available for the customer order in the relevant market at the time for transactions of the kind and size concerned

We shall pass on to the customer the details of the price at which the trade was executed to meet the customer order.

Where a customer order is subject to a special condition we will disclose any additional cost involved in satisfying the special condition or in respect of the non-standard element.

An example of when IEL will take particular care to assess the timing of execution of all or part of a current customer order includes when:

- We receive a customer order outside the normal trading hours of the relevant market or trading platform with a view to executing that customer order on that market or other trading platform;
- A foreseeable improvement in the level of liquidity in the relevant designated investment is likely to enhance the terms on which the firm executes the customer order;
- Executing the customer order as a series of partial executions over a period of time is likely to improve the terms on which the customer order as a whole is executed.

We may have reasonable grounds for postponing execution of a current customer order in the best interests of the customer. An example would be if the deal is part of an aggregated transaction.

IEL will occasionally execute orders in emerging markets (i.e. markets in countries with one or more of the following characteristics: political instability, uncertainty regarding financial markets and economic growth, developing financial markets and weak economies). It will only do so on behalf of clients who have a thorough understanding of such investments and the risks involved, and who have sufficient funds to assume these risks.

Execution Venues

We have included the list below of the Execution Venues which we believe best meet customer interests for the Best Execution of their orders on a consistent basis. When selecting a venue we have not only taken into account the fees and commissions when under taking a transaction but in addition we have also focused on the quality of execution available on the venue. The list of venues is not exhaustive and execution may occur in alternative venues from time to time provided those venues are consistent with this policy.

Conflicts of Interest Policy

General principle

Where a conflict of interest arises we will disclose this openly to our customers. We will endeavour to act professionally and independently with the customer's best interests always in mind. We will manage any conflict of interest situation fairly.

IEL will take all reasonable steps to identify conflicts of interest between:

- o Ourselves, including our managers, employees, appointed representatives (or where applicable tied agents), or any other person directly or indirectly linked to IEL and its clients;
- o One client and another.

IEL will maintain and operate effective organisational and administrative arrangements with a view to taking reasonable steps designed to prevent conflicts of interest from adversely affecting the interests of our clients. These arrangements will take into account any circumstances which may give rise to a conflict of interest arising as a result of the structure and business activities of each and every member of the IEL group.

We will endeavour to disclose the general nature and/or specific sources of conflict with the interest of our clients.

We will keep records of the services and activities performed by IEL in which a conflict of interest has arisen or may arise. These records will be updated regularly. Such obligation may, in some circumstances, be discharged through our Compliance Department with the requirement to prepare, maintain, and implement effective policies to minimise the potential for Conflicts of Interest to arise.

IEL continually monitors the above policy statements to ensure that they remain accurate and correct and offer the customer the best level of service expected from our firm.
